RILEY BRANTLEY

22 October 2019

Why I Want to be an Army Officer/Aviator

As Theodore Roosevelt said, "Nothing worth having comes easy." From a young child my parents have always taught me to never give up and if I dream it – I can do it, with hard work. I watched my dad live a life filled with hard work, persistence, and dedication to all things. He taught me to live by these characteristics in all things. Growing up, I have always looked up to my grandfather, a member of the United States Army. He always told me stories of army-life and I dreamed to one day walk in his footsteps. My father and grandfather were both perfect examples of how a man should act and lead others. Now it is my time.

I, Riley Dale Brantley, am seeking your consideration in being accepted into the WOFT program. I believe I am an excellent fit for this position because I have what it takes to be an aviator in the United States Army. I feel a calling in my heart and my soul to fly. I want to serve my country by flying for my country. My lifelong dream is piloting an aircraft for the United States of America. I am competitive, strong willed, have an excellent work ethic, and I am willing to lay it all on the line for the members of my team. I have always worked hard for the things I wanted. Good things don't come to those who wait around, waiting for a chance. People who take initiative and put themselves out there are more likely to achieve their desires. Failure is not an option. I worked tremendously hard in my high school years to achieve what I want. I studied hard, making sure to keep my grades high, to ensure more opportunities after high school. I practiced repeatedly to make sure I made the grade I wanted on my ASVAB. Given the opportunity, I can rest assured that I did everything in my power to be the best candidate. I am a fast learner, and I am not afraid of a learning curve. Whatever needs to get done, I will do it all.

I understand my odds of getting accepted into this program. The odds are slim, but I love a challenge. It is not about me; it is about the ones I will serve. I will celebrate my victories and be humble in my losses, while always looking out for others. I feel like I am very qualified for the position because of my willingness to sacrifice and my eagerness to learn and to be a leader for my peers. All I need is a chance to prove I am a terrific fit to be a Flight Warrant Officer for the United States Army. I have what it takes, and I will do whatever it takes to fulfill my destiny and the legacy that has been set in place before me. I hope you find it as strongly in your heart as I do in mine, to accept me for this position so I can prove that I was the right choice.
